Trip to the Cloisters Museum and Gardens

(submitted by Graham Van Keuren)

Join other folks from the church as we visit the Cloisters Museum and Gardens on Saturday, May 21st. This NYC destination is located in beautiful Fort Tryon Park (at least as nice as Central Park) and is a collection of medieval abbeys, religious artifacts, and gardens that together have become a campus of the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Events at the Cloisters for this all-day trip will include gallery talks, medieval garden tours, and workshops for families with kids ages 4-12. The cost, including transportation, will likely be about $35/person (includes admission, gas money and parking fee) plus food and anything you decide to buy on your own. Financial assistance is available for those who need it. As far as food goes, there are several neat cafés in the surrounding Washington Heights area or we could have a lovely picnic in the park if the weather permitted. Please fill out the form below by May 8th if you are planning to come and return it to the church office so that we can make the transportation arrangements.

From the Pastor

Dear Friends in Christ,

Now that Kate is graduating from Yale Divinity School this month, we bid her a fond farewell as she moves on to a more permanent ministry serving Christ's church. Join us on May 1st as we wish her well after church and celebrate her ministry with her.

We can also support her with our prayers. Here is a prayer for Kate that I offer for your use this month:

God of prophets and apostles, you have chosen leaders to train your people in the way of Jesus Christ. We thank you that in our day you still claim women and men for special work within the church. As Kate has dedicated herself to you, surround her by grace and mercy, so that she may grow in wisdom, mature in love, and become a faithful worker approved by Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

I am thankful for the welcome Kate has received from so many of you and I'm especially grateful for the feedback group that met with Kate several times after worship in order to provide specific constructive comments about the practice of her ministry.

Unfortunately, it doesn't appear as though Yale will be able to match our church with a seminarian next year. If that proves to be the case, I will miss the collegiality of working with a seminarian but I know that we have such a great reservoir of faith and talent among our members and friends. We will grow and stretch in faith anyway!

Thanks be to God for all those God has gifted for ministry among us!

Faithfully yours,

Graham Van Keuren

Missions Outreach

2nd Mile Missions (submitted by Geneva Farnham)

Mothers and Fathers Day will be approaching soon. Let us celebrate their love for us by supporting the sale of Mothers and Fathers Day cards – minimum cost is $5 for each card but any generous amount is acceptable. Barbara Baugniet will be offering these cards Sunday, May 1 in the Wood Chapel following worship service - Art Lachance will be assisting All of this is in support of Blankets + (and) and Tools which is the 2nd Mile Mission for the month of May.

We, here in the Congregational Church of Somersville, have joined with Church World Service in support of this great work. Together we can provide blankets for warmth and protection, during times of disaster and later, as victims are struggling to recover, seeds and tools to work and plant the soil. Even dig wells for water. This is such a great work.

Let's join together and become the plus in Blankets +.

Cornerstone Soup Kitchen

If you're available to help serve only, please arrive at Cornerstone by 4 PM. Please speak with myself or Johanna Karbonic if interested or if you have questions.

Historian's Corner (submitted by Johanna Karbonic, Historian)

Church Historian's Workshop

On April 16, 2011, I attended a very interesting and exciting workshop on "Records Management for Church Collections". After the Call to Worship, Jessica Steytler, archivist of the Congregational Library & Archive in Boston, gave a very informative presentation about records management. She described with a power point program – about getting started, a guide to types of records, organizational tips, how to deal with electronic records and preservation concerns. Since resource materials were included, I obtained extra booklets for people in our church who already deal with record keeping.

The presentation made me realize; that we need to get our records in better order or at least have a guide to where our important records are located. Watching the power point program and hearing the talk and discussions, have inspired me to try to develop a policy and procedure for keeping our church records. Now to find the time!

An optimal example of electronically keeping records was presented by the pastor of a Congregational Church in Seymour. His records are on an IPAD where he can literally keep information at his finger tips, download information to a power point program and do various other things which made my head swirl. It's exciting, but possibly beyond our budget. If anyone is interesting in getting involved, please let me know.

Who Are We?

(This has been the most challenging interview I have had. Have you ever tried to catch the wind?)

He became a member of this church in 1966 after graduating from the University of Connecticut - Agricultural Program. His early memories of the church started when he received a firm welcoming handshake from John Griswold, who was Sr. Deacon and permanent greeter at that time. She became a member in 1969 after their marriage at St. Michael's Episcopal Church in Highworth of Wiltshire County, England in June 1969 and a second marriage ceremony at the Congregational Church of Somersville. She joined this church with her sister-in-law because it was the church her husband and in-laws attended. She was also made very welcome by John Griswold and the congregation. Her parents and family remained in England.

What kept you coming to this church? He explained it very nicely in the July/August 1994 Spire- "My Love Affair with the Church": "The friendship and sense of family extended to me and my family has grown to be a trademark of this church. As with any "love affair", life within this church has its ups and downs, its good times and times we would like to put behind us. God tests our commitment to Him and this church through some of the challenges and differences we have had; but the one thing that keeps shining through is the ability of the members of our congregational family to put their differences aside and go on with God's love as their guide. "

She loves the smallness of the church with the opportunity to know everyone. It makes her feel at home to be at this church. It is also relaxing – peaceful, and offers a get-away which rejuvenates her spirit.

His fondest memories are the Maundy Thursday Seder meal service, the baptism of all their children, the weddings of all three daughters in the church, and the Sunday he brought the Heifer Project calf to the church to show the Sunday school children what they were raising money to support. The calf then went to an Indian reservation in New York.

Her fondest memories are so many – but the ones that stood out were the social gatherings of the Ladies Aid group.

He would not like to see anything different in the church. She would like to have fewer dinners because everyone works so hard to put them on. There is also the fear that people won't join the church because they feel they have to work at a dinner.

People they would like to honor or who they admire are - Gertrude Wood, Thelma Smith and John Griswold.

They are truly a wonderful giving couple who put church, family and friends at the top of their priority list. As he said "I thank God for this church and the opportunity to be part of it." If you can't recognize this couple, the answer is on the back page of the Spire.

Recap of April Supper

Reservations filled up within a day and a half! There were only a few "no shows" this time and 24 take out orders were picked up. The roast beef, cooked to perfection by Nick Wood, was delicious; folks really enjoyed the corn at this dinner, and the lemon lush! It was a hit – again! Income for the evening was $2333.00 including $102.00 from the bake sale. Expenses were $299.88. Thanks to everyone who contributed and assisted in the success of this dinner.

Chicken Cordon Bleu on May 14

Next up is our chicken cordon bleu supper on May 14. The chicken breasts will be in the kitchen on Friday the 13th so we can beat the heck out of them (getting rid of our frustrations), and prepare them with the ham, cheese and bread crumbs. Anyone willing to assist is welcome to join us beginning at 9 AM.

We're trying something different this month by serving the entrée with rice pilaf; dessert will be new and different too. A recipe for "dirt dessert" is in the church cookbook and we are altering it slightly. We really need folks to prepare this dessert; we've only got 6 out of 18 signed up for. It's easy to make with only 5 ingredients:

- 1 lb. pkg. oreo cookies
- 1 qt. milk
- 12 oz. cream cheese – softened
- 3 sm. pkg. vanilla instant pudding
- 12 oz. cool whip

Won't you consider making 1 or two? The recipe is posted in the social room; please sign up on the bulletin board in the social room.

Some other items still needed for this supper include:

- 31 lbs. frozen mixed vegetables
- 4 loaves homemade breads
- 25 lb. rice
- 48 oz containers chicken broth

Again, check out the sign up sheet in the social room.

The more items donated, the less our expenses; the greater the proceeds to support our operating budget.

June Features Strawberry Supper

Looking ahead a month, our annual Strawberry Supper will be held June 18th. The major item needed in June are the berries – folks to pick (we pick up the tab if you go to Meadowbrook Farms in East Longmeadow) or donate flats. Details on that supper will be in the June Spire.

This & That

- Fellowship hosts are needed. Anyone willing to provide a light snack following worship on any given Sunday is encouraged to sign up in the social room
- Meeting minutes are to be filed with the office. Copies will also be posted on the bulletin board on the south wall of the social room.

Connecticut Conference, UCC

The Spring Session of the Conference Annual Meeting will be held May 14th in Naugatuck. Andover Newton Theological School's J. Mary Luti is the vibrant keynoter for a day of "Worship Remix," looking at ways of coming to God with energy, integrity, and sincerity. The night before, May 13th, is a Youth Revival called "Walking in the Spirit," to be held at Faith Congregational Church in Hartford. UCC youth from across the state will share in music, liturgical dance, drama, and worship. There will also be a display from In Our Shoes, an anti-bullying project of King Street United Church of Christ in Danbury.

Anyone interested in attending as a delegate (with Rev. Van Keuren) should speak with him as soon as possible.

Archaeologist claims to find nails from Jesus' cross

April 14, 2011 Religion News Service by Michele Chabin

JERUSALEM

An Israeli-Canadian journalist believes he may have tracked down two of the iron nails used to crucify Jesus to the cross. Or at least objects that "could be" the long-lost relics.

While researching a segment for the History Channel series "Secrets of Christianity," host and producer Simcha Jacobovici learned something that startled him: In 1990, Israeli archeologists excavating a 2,000-year-old burial cave discovered two nails crafted by the Romans, but kept the discovery quiet.

They did, however, publicize the discovery of two ossuaries — stone burial boxes filled with human bones — with the inscriptions "Caiaphas" and "Joseph son of Caiaphas." The latter intricately carved ossuary toured the world and is now prominently displayed in the Israel Museum in Jerusalem.

According to the Gospels, Caiaphas was the Jewish high priest who handed Jesus over to the Romans for crucifixion.

"There's a general scholarly consensus that the tomb where the nails were found likely belonged to Caiaphas. Nails at that time were a dime a dozen, but finding one in a tomb is exceedingly rare," Jacobovici said outside the high stone walls of the Old City, where Jesus spent his final days.

When Jacobovici found a brief reference to the nails in the official archeologists' report, "my jaw dropped," he said.

"It would be as if, 2,000 years from now, archaeologists uncovered the cave of Muhammad Ali but neglected to mention the pair of boxing gloves found there. Sure, boxing gloves are common, but perhaps those particular gloves had special significance to the boxer?"

Jacobovici also hosts the "Naked Archaeologist" series on History International and collaborated with filmmaker James Cameron on the controversial 2007 documentary, "The Lost Tomb of Jesus."

In the segment "Nails of the Cross," which will air on April 20 on the History Channel, Jacobovici attempts to discover why the researchers felt the nails were unimportant.

"Everything else is so meticulous, yet there are no photos or drawings or measurements of the nails. When I inquired at the Israel Antiquities Authority, I was told they had gone missing."

"Caiaphas is known for one thing only: the trial and Crucifixion of Jesus," Jacobovici said. "He may have felt compelled to take these nails with him to his grave."

There was also the belief among some ancient Jews that nails had healing powers "and were a ticket to the afterlife. Other items found in the tomb show that this was a superstitious guy," he added.

The history detective searched the IAA's vast warehouses and then tried to find the location of the long-sealed tomb, which now lies beneath a public park.

Finally, on a hunch, Jacobovici approached Israel Hershkovitz, a forensic anthropologist at Tel Aviv University, who is also expert on crucifixions.

"When I asked Hershkovitz if he'd received two nails about 20 years ago, he knew exactly what I was talking about and located them within minutes," Jacobovici recalled.

Hershkovitz could not say where the nails had been found because the original packaging lacked the information. He could not be reached for comment.

While Hershkovitz knows for certain the nails came from the IAA, there's no conclusive link that they came from the Caiaphas tomb. Israeli archaeologists seem as reluctant to comment this time around as they were back in 1990.

When the anthropologist showed Jacobovici an ancient heel bone impaled with a nail — the only such crucifixion specimen ever unearthed — "I realized that the Caiaphas nails were similar, though shorter. The tips appeared purposely bent to keep them from falling off the wood."

Jacobovici asked Hershkovitz whether the nails could have been used to crucify a person's hands to a cross. Hershkovitz said "yes."

The limestone residue on one of the nails clinched it for Jacobovici, "because one of the nails was found in the ossuary, the other on the ground" of the burial cave, where it would be exposed to limestone.

Gabriel Barkay, a professor of archaeology at Bar-Ilan University, called Jacobovici's investigation "very challenging, very interesting, very intriguing, but it's a TV show and not a scholarly study.

"There's no proof whatsoever that they originate in the tomb of Caiaphas," he said. "It's all conjecture."

Nails were used for "many purposes," Barkay noted, "from fixing iron gates to wooden doors and coffins."

And for crucifixions.

Ronny Reich, a Haifa University archeologist who deciphered the writing in the Caiaphas cave, believes the cave "belongs to a member of the Caiaphas family, but we have no evidence it belongs to the high priest."

Jacobovici, however, is certain his research will withstand scrutiny, even if it seems largely circumstantial at first glance.

"Skepticism is good. As with the Shroud of Turin, you can't be 100 percent certain, but believers don't need 100 percent certainty. They need a solid 'could be,' and that's what we're offering."
